THE THRICE-A-WEEK EDITION OF THE NEW YORK WORLD

IN 1917

Practically a Daily at the Price of a Weekly. No other Newspaper in the world gives so much at so low a price.

The value and need of a newspaper in the household was never greater than at the present time. The great war in Europe is now half way into its third year, and, whether peace be at hand or yet far off, it and the events to follow it are sure to be of absorbing interest for many a month to come.

These are world-shaking affairs, in which the United States, willing or unwilling, is compelled to take a part. No intelligent person can ignore such issues.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and the HOPKINSVILLE KENTUCKIAN (Tri-weekly.)

together for one year for $2.65. The regular subscription price of the two papers is $3.00.

True Friendship.

We are all inclined to lean too much on friendship; to depend not on our own souls for strength, but on the strength that comes from other souls. So the building in process of erection has many props to support it; but as it nears completion prop after prop is knocked away, and it is secure only as it rises firmly in its own foundation. No friend can bear our burden for us; the most he can do is to help us to bear it well, prompting us to endeavor by his sympathy and wisdom. If we have so used friendship that we have lost the power to stand alone, we have misused it.

BERMUDA IN FOOD CRUSADE

Government of Island Colony Urges Farmers Not to Rely Further on Imported Supplies.

United States Consul Carl R. Loop, at Hamilton, says: The department of agriculture of Bermuda has issued a leaflet for general distribution throughout the colony, urging on the farmers the necessity of growing larger quantities of food for home consumption. It says in part:

"The government is most anxious that farmers and others realize the importance under present conditions of increasing local food supplies. The high prices of imported foodstuffs, which are likely to be still further increased in the future, add very greatly to the cost of living, and at the present time it is a patriotic duty for all to do their utmost to insure the practice of economy in every department of life.

"Heretofore the farmers of the colony have depended too much on imported and too little on home-grown foods. The present aim of every farmer should be to produce as much food for his family and live stock as he can grow with economy, and to have a surplus to sell. By so doing he can greatly reduce his own cost of living and at the same time lessen the colony's dependence on imported foods. The high cost of imported foodstuffs should increase the demand for local grown foods, and a market would seem to be assured, especially for potatoes, both Irish and sweet, and pigs."

BIRDS WOULD CONSERVE FOOD

Return of Feathered Benefactors to Farm Would Mean Saving of Billion Dollars a Year.

If the Eastern states alone could bring back the quail, the rose-breasted grosbeaks and other bird benefactors they would save $15,000,000 a year in the price of materials used to kill potato bugs.

Charles P. Shoffner of the Liberty Bell Bird club made this statement, the Philadelphia North American states. He made a plea for the birds as a means of conserving the nation's food resources.

"If Pennsylvania had but one pair of robins to the acre," he said, "the birds would consume 3,600 tons of insects a day. The nation loses $1,000,000,000 a year through ravages of insects which the birds can eliminate."

"Next year the country must double its crop output to feed its army. It is necessary, therefore, to have the best crops we can obtain, and the way to obtain them is by bringing back the birds."

Mr. Shoffner explained the importance of erecting bird houses to take the places of the thickets, the hollow trees and other natural resting places for the birds which have disappeared.

Keep Your Fish Dry.

Strange as it may seem there is nothing in the world that will spoil a dead fish so quickly as water. If your fishing conditions are such as to prevent your keeping your catch alive, by all means kill each one as quickly as caught, and having done so dry it and keep it dry. Remember that a fish strung through the gills and thrown overboard is doomed to a speedy death by suffocation. If you must string them use one of the patent stringers that holds through the jaw and gives the fish a fighting chance for life. If, however, you can neither treat your catch in this way nor turn them loose in a tank, kill them instantly, wipe them quite dry and keep them sheltered from the sun. Fish should not be packed so that they come in direct contact with ice; place a sheet of nonabsorbent paper between. Avoid damp moss or seaweed in your creel.

Blossoms for Dead Soldiers.

One of the most prosperous agricultural districts in France at the present time is in the near neighborhood of Toulon, the Mediterranean seaport not far from Marseilles, and therefore far distant from the scene of war.

But the war is to this district the most important source of its prosperity. For its chief product is those tiny, long-lasting flowers known as "immortelles." They go, in vast quantities, to decorate the graves of French soldiers. In early spring the fields planted with them are densely carpeted with the blossoms—associated in everybody's mind not with life, but with death—which are picked in early morning, before the dew is off the ground, and shipped, via Toulon, to all parts of France.

Bee's Intelligence Overrated.

The intelligence of the honey bee has been greatly overrated, according to Everett F. Phillips, who is the government expert on bee culture. He says that this insect really has no adaptability at all, but a wonderfully perfected instinct. Success in bee-keeping, therefore, depends upon studying the bee and giving it exactly what its imperious instincts require. For example, the space between the wall of a hive and the comb in which the honey is to be placed must be exactly a quarter of an inch. If it is more the bees will store honey in the space, and if it is less they will seal it closed. In either case the hive must be broken open to get the honey.

BRANDED AS MYTH

Mother Never Really Carried Market Basket, It Is Declared.

Even Before Days of Telephone Housewife Seldom Went to the Grocery or the Butcher Shop.

A voice of protest rises in the East. There, as elsewhere, sundry lecturers have been talking to women's clubs about the high cost of living. Said one of them:

"Housewives could reduce the cost of food if they would market in person. Too many market by telephone." This is a typical remark.

"Our mothers and our grandmothers," continued the lecturer, "went personally to the grocer and the butcher. They saw what they bought. And they used to carry it home with them."

The conclusion is obvious, says the Indianapolis News. Our mothers and our grandmothers, paying these daily visits to the grocer and butcher, were able to buy reasonable products—and the best of the products—at lowest prices. They made their own selections; they picked out what they wanted.

A woman took issue with this statement. Others followed. This argument, they said, has gone undisputed long enough. As a matter of fact, our mothers and grandmothers did very little marketing in person. The telephone in their day was not used, to be sure. There were few telephones to be used. But 30 years ago—and even in more recent times—the grocer's boy called daily, recited some new items of stock, jogged the patron's memory with a few questions regarding the quantity of potatoes, sugar, flour and salt on hand, took the customer's order and departed. Mother saw the goods for the first time when the grocer's boy, later in the day, delivered them.

And in grandmother's day, the women protesters declared, four-fifths of the marketing was done by sending Johnny or Mary to the grocer or the butcher. And many of us who are something over thirty and not yet turned sixty, regardless of sex, can find without effort, in the depths of memory, personal evidence to substantiate this claim. How many times were we brought complainingly in from play to "go to the grocer's?" And at the tender age of seven or eight or nine, did we do much selecting when we thus filled the household order? Very little, as we recall it. On the contrary, we took what the grocer gave us and hurried home with the purchase, making sure both coming and going that we kept safely in hands or pockets the little brown book in which the purchase was duly and carefully recorded by the grocer or the grocer's clerk.

Times have changed. Johnny and Mary go seldom nowadays to the grocer or to the butcher or to the baker. Mother rings them up and delivers her order by telephone. But—is the difference very great? Is it sufficiently great to account for the vast increase in the cost of groceries and meats and bread and rolls? Substituting the telephone for the grocer boy's daily visit or for marketing with the children as proxy will hardly seem to some of us, now that memory is aroused, to account for the higher cost of living.

Conservation of Labor Supply.

If we are wise and far-sighted we shall enforce child labor laws and school laws more rigidly than ever just now. We shall scrutinize and regulate every single use of children in industry, for there must be nothing heedless in the emergency about our use of human resources. More than that, we shall stimulate educational activity, especially in industrial training, and support as never before public and private child welfare agencies, if we are going to make the most of the material we have in hand. In short, we must protect, train and develop children now for the simple reason that for the future, both remote and immediate, we need a more intelligent and able-bodied set of people than ever. "The nation is under special obligation to secure that the rising generation grows up strong and hardy both in body and character," is the solemn warning of England, which has been at war for three years, to America, on the threshold of war.—The New Republic.

Japanese Have No Beds.

The Japanese do not sleep on European beds, but on many thick, soft puffs piled one on top of each other upon the floor. For bed covering they use more of the same kind of puffs. It is said that the Japanese emperor has 20 such puffs. One of those which cover him is made in the shape of a kimono and has a velvet collar. Probably he creeps inside of this, if he feels cold in the night.

Put the Dollar to Work.

When a manufacturer or other producer of real wealth does a profitable business and turns his profits back into the business, he gives employment to men and creates more real wealth as he progresses year by year. He does more real good for his fellowmen than he would if he gave all his profits in charity, because it is better to make people self-supporting and independent than it is to give them something for nothing no matter how worthy the motives may be.

Enforced Labor.

"Providence has so ordered it that a state of rest and inaction, however it may flatter our indolence, should be productive of many inconveniences; that it should generate such disorders as may force us to have recourse to some labor as a thing absolutely requisite to make us pass our lives with tolerable satisfaction." — Edmund Burke.
